Due to the nationwide shortage of nurses, a growing number of companies have emerged seeking to provide nurse staffing services. It is not always easy to determine which firms provide a quality, professional service and which do not. In the following assessment, Dave Campbell, Vice President of Human Resources for Kent Memorial Hospital in Warwick, Rhode Island, discusses why he selected O'Grady Peyton to assist his facility with its nurse staffing needs.

"Our first priority was to find a long-term solution to our nurse staffing needs – one that would provide continuity and quality of care. We favored O'Grady Peyton's approach, in which international nurses are already licensed to work in the U.S. and have gone through the immigration process. It seems that many entrepreneurs are going to India and other countries today in order to take advantage of the current need for nurses."

"However, we wanted a firm with a solid reputation and a proven track record, one that is in the industry for the long-term. We also wanted an opportunity to retain international nurses on a permanent basis once the initial contract period expires, an option which O'Grady Peyton encourages."

"In light of our needs, O'Grady Peyton's performance has been excellent. They are honest and upfront in working with us and have been able to provide us with high quality nurses. "

"I would have absolutely no problem recommending O'Grady Peyton to others and we will continue to work with them in the future."
